COURSE OBJECTIVES:

This course offers a thorough understanding of society, its institutions, social behaviour, and a wide range of issues that have an impact on people locally, nationally, and internationally. Law is a social construct that is a tool for social control and regulation. The course offers an interdisciplinary method for analysing and interpreting the law, the phenomena of the law, the connection between these things, and their interactions with society. to provide a quick overview of social research as a tool for comprehending social reality. Overall, this course aims to give students an innate grasp of how law and society are related, connected, and associated in order to improve their abilities to study law in a social context.
