

2.6.2. Attainment of Programme Outcomes and Course Outcomes are evaluated by the Institution

Response:

At the start of each semester, a course plan is developed for every subject, aligning with both the course and program outcomes. Teachers are briefed at the beginning of the term and are encouraged to incorporate Bloom's Taxonomy terminology when creating the course plan. The question papers are designed to reflect these taxonomy terms, making it easier to assess whether the course objectives have been met. Each subject's lesson plan is regularly reviewed to ensure it is completed within the allocated time-frame, allowing students sufficient time to prepare for their semester exams.

The performance of students serves as the key evaluation factor for determining the success of the course and program outcomes. KLE College of Law's alumni are well-established in prestigious roles across the state, working in renowned law firms, as practicing advocates, and as legal officers in private companies. Current students at KLE have also participated in various competitions, earning accolades that contribute to the college's reputation. These achievements demonstrate that both the course and program outcomes are successfully met, showcasing the effectiveness of the curriculum in preparing students for professional success.
